Chapter M Bankruptcy

An interesting proposal

Georgetown Law professor Adam Levitin has proposed that a new chapter be added to the U.S. Bankruptcy Code to deal with the foreclosure crisis. We examine his idea on our bankruptcy blog.

The Return of Zombie Mortgages

They actually never left.

Last year, the news media and financial pundits made a great to-do about so-called zombie mortgages. Now, just in time for Halloween, they are resurfacing in the media. We discuss the phenomena and its implications on our new foreclosure defense blog.

Just Walk Away?

Think again.

As the economic downturn continues with no realistic end in sight, the idea of strategic default has come back into vogue. Also known as the "just walk away" movement, the concept is especially dangerous for Illinois home owners. We demystify and debunk a recent "Just walk away" article on our consumer defense blog.
